MISS - MAPLE

pendant-lamps

The pendant lamp „Miss Maple“ is showing the use of a familiar material in an unconventional way. We usually experience wood as a plain surface, but here it is broken down into a grid of triangles. This makes a flexible lampshade which can be transformed manually in three-dimensional ways.

While the lamp generates warm light at night the surface outside becomes more evident with daylight and turns the lamp into sculptural object.

edition vanTreeck

„Woven-Glass“ is approaching the material glass in applying the traditional technique of weaving.

Weaving normally requires a material that is flexible, like yarns which can bend easily. To reach the same effect colored glass stripes need to be pre-formed in the kiln to allow the process of interweaving different layers of glass. Transparent color gradients overlap and mix under the influence of light to form a textured glass surface.
